DETAILED ACTION

Information Disclosure Statement

1. The information disclosure statement has been received and considered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over German publication 321 in view of U.S. patent to (Enoch) Hagerman et al. '631.

Regarding claims 1-9 the German publication discloses a brake mechanism 4a and a locking mechanism at 10.

Although it appears elements 11 and 12 in the different embodiments may be a sensor to sense the directional movement of the roller 1 this is unclear.

Enoch is relied upon to show it is known to use a sensor mechanism 108 to activate the braking mechanism 86 (see figure 11).

It would have been obvious to have employed such a sensor arrangement in German '321 to sense the directional movement of the belt to activate the brake. Such an arrangement would amount to a known obvious alternative method of activation of the brakes.

4. Claims 1-9 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hagerman et al in view of DE '321.

Regarding claims 1-9 Hagerman et al. shows a braking arrangement that uses a wedge member to brake the belt. In figure 11 Hagerman et al. shows a sensor arrangement 98 and 108 to activate the brake.

Lacking in Hagerman are the specifics of a sensor arrangement that senses the directional rotation of the roller to activate the brake.

However, DE '321 appears to teach this at 11 and 12.

To have applied these teachings of DE '321 to that of Hagerman et al. would have amounted to an obvious alternative sensor arrangement to apply the brake to the conveyor belt. Both references are directed to the same conveyor belt braking concept.
